Bob Vignola joined Affiliated Monitors, Inc. in 2012 as a Director of Corporate Compliance Programs and has worked on several large-scale monitorships in the fields of government contracting, international development, construction, telecommunication, multi-level marketing, and consultancy.

Mr. Vignola retired from the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) in 2011 with 38 years of experience in Inspector General oversight and auditing with the CIA and the Department of Defense (DoD). He most recently served as Deputy Inspector General for the National Reconnaissance Organization (NRO), where he worked with the Inspector General to lead a staff of nearly 100 auditors, inspectors, and investigators in overseeing NRO programs, finances, and contractor activities. At the NRO he stood up the first professional audit team with a focus on determining the reliability and integrity of controls and processes across the organization. Under his leadership the Inspector General team successfully completed the first financial statement audit within the intelligence community with sustainable results. Mr. Vignola was recognized within the Intelligence Community with the Inspector General Leadership Award for establishing effective oversight of NRO programs, improvements in financial reporting, and internal management activities.

Within the DoD, Mr. Vignola conducted audits and oversight of contractor compliance with laws, regulations and accounting activities across a range of industries beginning with serving with the Defense Contract Audit Agency. As Program Director for contract audit policy for the DoD Inspector General, he led oversight of some of the Departments most sensitive programs, developed the guidelines for contract auditor support to DoD investigations and assessed government and defense industry trends towards fraud awareness, prevention and reporting.

A former Senior Intelligence Service Officer, Mr. Vignola earned a BA in Business Administration, Accounting, and System Design from Pace University, attended the Federal Executive Institute, completed the Office of Personnel Management Executive Development Program, attended the Air Force Institute of Technology, and is a Certified Inspector General (CIG).
